...cheered the crowd.-The firemen, the soldiers, the police, the officers of the company, and a few sober citizens looked on with bated breath, awaiting the action of somebody. If this state of torpidity lasted, the mob hoped that the building and all contained in it would be consumed. At this crisis the city police, in augmented force, appeared on the scene and stopped before the engine nearest the depot sheds, surrounded it and its crew and then moved forward to the hydrants, from which water could be taken, halting only when they gained a position whence their hoses could command the roofs of the burning structure. The mob was caught unprepared for so bold a maneuver, still it did not recoil-until the policemen had emptied their revolvers, and followed up the advantage gained by a fierce onslaught with their heavy clubs. The plugs were opened, hose attached and water thrown with effect, while the police continued to advance, driving the mob before them. Soon the flames were converted into harmless clouds of steam. The women mingling in the mob tried to force the men back to the assault, and did several times succeed in bringing their almost disheartened followers face to face with the blue coats, but it was only a momentary rally, and they fell back to their former positions. Then there arrived another squad of police, with fresh-filled navy pistols, making a sortie, backed by a platoon of the Fifth Regiment, and causing the riotous element to subside and withdraw to a safe distance. Several of the female rioters, however, almost unassisted by the males, came to a stand in the neighborhood of Lee street, refusing stubbornly to budge another inch, fairly defying the police, threatening them with stones and clubs, and urging and coaxing the demoralized com...
