From a philosophical and law enforcement perspective, Tim argues that silent encroachments have systematically undermined the American Constitution by way of Politicians, Special Interests, Bureaucrats, Lawyers, and Corporate Lobbyists, who then create the modern Legal System. Contrary to the security of the fundamental rights and liberty of the individual, authoritarian collectivism, forced economic activity, social engineering and the legal plundering of property are being forced onto the American people. This is happening at all levels of government, while systematically advocating the necessity of such policy for the public's safety and for national security. This book also seeks to answer age-old philosophical questions in a contemporary perspective; What is the just and moral role of government? What did the founders say? What does it mean to be free in America today compared to history? What are rights and where do they come from? What does it mean to own property? What is neo-progressive compared to progressive? What is the sound role of law enforcement? What is equality?
