They cried as he lay dying . . . then wept for joy when he returned from a Near Death Experience! (NDE)

The heartwarming true story of a successful young man and his Rockwellian family who seemed to have it all; a beautiful home, new cars, boats, airplanes and European vacations. Then, just when life should have been perfect . . . a Stanford medical specialist diagnosed him with a terminal illness, giving him five months to live . . . and their whole world came crashing down . . .

As the young family struggled to comprehend what was happening, their planes, boats and other toys sat unused, as his 5 months stretched into 12. Being an agnostic, he didn't believe life after death, expecting only oblivion when he died.

His wife wanted to do more, medically. But, they already had the best doctors money could buy. So, short of visiting a South American witch doctor, what were they to do?

However, as death approached and his agony grew worse, death and it's promised release from the pain, became more and more attractive. But, to his wife and daughters, his growing acceptance of death and dying seemed like abandonment.

In the darkness of one early morning, death finally came and he found he had been wrong about death meaning oblivion. Instead, he suddenly found himself falling through space . . . as his after death experiences began. Here, taken from his book is what, and who, was awaiting him.

"There to greet me was my grandfather Amos, along with my favorite boyhood dog, Butch, his tail wagging in greeting. And there was my other granddad, Frank, with his wry, bemused smile, three central characters in my Rockwellian childhood. There too, was an old rancher who lived across the river from where I grew up who had always hired me when I needed money, even if he really didn't need the help.

Also, there were others; entities I had known and loved in other times and other places, some of this earthly realm, some from places beyond death; still others from Celestial Realms outside of this material Universe. However, all were beloved members of an ancient Soul Group with which I had been reincarnating, over and over, through the endless eons."

Then, before he was returned to his life, from beyond death, he was told that in order to do what he was being sent back to do, he would be taught the use of Inner Guidance. Accordingly, when he got back he was to watch for any inner urges or quiet voices within. If he listened carefully, they would lead him to an instruction manual for his use in the matter. Furthermore, finding it would be his first test. However, when he got back, he had no idea how or where to begin.

Several months after his return, seemingly quite by accident, he just "happened" to be in a neighboring town, when a small white book found its way into his hands in a most unusual manner. That evening, as he glanced through the book, he knew his training had begun in earnest.
